Impeached!

ECSU/ECARA Director ousted

by Kevin Sager

Michelle Au has been impeached from her Club Administrator's position at ECSU and dropped from her VP Finance position on ECARA due to her very conspicuous absences during the summer session weekly meetings.

According to VP Finance Vince De Marinis, Au neglected to fulfill her obligations to the various student clubs and did not attend any meetings, save for one. After repeated failed attempts to contact Au, a special ECSU meeting was held on July 26, directly after a conventional meeting. At this special meeting ECSU decided unanimously that Au would be impeached (removed from her position) for violating Sec. 16d of the ECSU constitution for missing more than 3 meetings.

De Marinis stated that he was "happy and surprised" to see her when she did attend her first and last meeting in the summer session.

Jim Cheung, an employee with a travelling casino outfit, told the medium II that Au was seen on various occasions gambling until very late hours. Cheung verified that some occasions were Monday nights when ECSU meetings took place. He stated with no uncertainty that Au was seen at the Skyline Hotel until 3 a.m.

Au's duties would have included meetings with club leaders over the summer to organize them for club week following Orientation, as well as to help coordinate the various events throughout the year.

"She wasn't there to do that. She wasn't around the school, period. We're all trying to pitch in as much as we can," said De Marinis, adding that ECSU managed during the busy Orientation period without her services.

The situation was somewhat similar in her dealings with ECARA with the exception of an actual impeachment. According to ECARA and ECSU, Au had sent letters of resignation to them. As of yet no letters have been received by either group, according to both ECARA president Jack Krist and De Marinis.

Krist stated that Au did not attend any Orientation Frosh Olympics meetings and will not be paid for the time she held the position. "If you don't fulfill your duties for the school year, you don't get the cheque," he said. De Marinis similarly added that she would not be paid for the summer, adding that, as with ECARA, Au never divulged an explanation about where she had been or what she had been doing.

Both ECSU and ECARA are planning to hold by-elections in the upcoming weeks, although there are no firm dates yet.

Michelle Au could not be reached for comment prior to publication, although several attempts were made by many parties.

Be a duck!!

Among the many events that frosh took part in this year for orientation; a trip to a Jays Game (in which unfortunately Toronto lost 10-4 to the Oakland Athletics), and a tour of the downtown campus, including Hart House and the Sigmund Samuels Library were highlights. Even though Erindale did not take part in SAC's elaborate, entertaining activities, still, a good time was had by all.

Frosh give orientation mixed reviews

by Paul Hartman

Poor weather, organizational mix-ups and bad food were the highlights of this year's ECSU orientation. Students spent their first day at Erindale getting acquainted with the academic aspects. ECSU, as well as the administration, provided a series of seminars to familiarize the frosh with the college and its programs.

Orientation registration followed, during which Aysun Basaran talked about personal safety and health tips. She also provided students with useful information on sexual harrassment and assault.

Following the speeches, students travelled downtown to tour the Athletic Center, Robarts and Sigmund Samuel Libraries.

Unlike past years, Erindale students did not get involved in SAC's orientation.This was due to a lack of effective communication. ECSU VP Finance Vince De Marinis stated that ECSU declined involvement with SAC because of their poor organizational record. However, SAC officials purport to have asked ECSU to attend a parade downtown as well as other events. Unfortunately neither governing body could come to a compromise and Erindale students toured downtown separate from the St. George frosh. De Marinis was quoted as saying, "the students do not take classes downtown anyway so the focus of their orientation should be Erindale." He add that SAC's activities were "cheap, piggish...really childish," in reference to SAC president Ed deGale's public announcement that there was no clear reason for Erindale to stay separate from SAC's Orientation activities. De Marinis responded that deGale knew full well of the situation yet he [and SAC] chose not to work with ECSU.

Despite this setback ECSU and the frosh ended their day with a tour of Hart House. Highlighting the day was a trip to Skydome to watch the Jays and the Oakland A's.

ECSU planned Day 2 of Orientation 93 to be spent at Hart House Farms.Unfortunately, bad weather spoiled the plan and ECSU had the students spend the day at the pub listening to various bands and being entertained by a comedian, Larry Horowitz and hypnotist Casey Bones. Demetri Bouras, Public Relations Director for ECSU commented, "When people didn't like a particular band they couldn't even play baseball or soccer because of the weather." "We would have lost people to the residences if we had attempted the scavenger hunt," added Bouras.

Despite inclement weather these frosh and their intrepid leader managed to summon up morale.

Luckily Bones arrived to save the day with another hilarious show in the meeting place, inducing freshmen to strip for the audience. "Chico", as one freshmen has been dubbed, will never live his dance down.

The planned bonfire was dampened by the cold temperature and the rain. For those who did not want to roast marshmallows, the pub was kept open and an impromptu dance was held.

The week ended with the ECARA Olympics (for write-up please see sports), and a MuchMusic Video Road Show. Many frosh and leaders showed up to end frosh week with a bang. Steve Taylor, ECSU's Academic Director, felt that everyone had a good time. "Orientation is what you make it. Getting involved means having more fun," Taylor said.

Admittedly, orientation is what you make it, but according to some Frosh leaders many new students were disappointed that they'd paid so much and gotten so little in return.

Condom conundrum

by Natalie Guriel and Kevin Sager

Once again the condom debate has resurfaced. Respect Yourself is again offended by the placement of condoms in the Hygiene Kit, which also contains soap, pharmaceuticals, and other health-oriented items.

Respect Yourself is a group that promotes chastity as the only guaranteed method to protect against sexually transmitted diseases such as AIDS. Since it is a legitimate on-campus student group, ECSU agreed to include their literature in the kit. However, it does not reflect ECSU's views or the views of the University.

The presence of the literature, according to ECSU VP Finance Vince De Marinis, is to give students the opportunity to have access to differing views on safe sex. The literature outlines Respect Yourself's views on sexual assault, unplanned pregnancies, and sexually transmitted diseases.

During an ECSU meeting which took place on Sept. 7, twenty members of Respect Yourself demonstrated outside the Crossroads Building to register their displeasure at the offending prophylactics.

The group carried signs promoting chastity, and appeared to be composed partially of people who were not students, according to Natalie Guriel, who was present to cover the meeting.

John McCash, the president of this organization, has long been active in opposing the addition of condoms in Frosh kits, and has even run for the positions of Public Relations, Social Director, and more recently, Academic Director in the ECSU by-election.

On the subject of the protest De Marinis said , "Any university group wanting to include something in the Orientation Kit would have the right to do so...we don't exclude anything.[Most] companies will advertise their products this way, but no other groups like [Respect Yourself] came forward."

John McCash could not be reached for comment.

Prof honoured

by Kevin Sager

The 3M Fellowship, a prestigious award which recognizes excellency in university teaching, has recently been awarded to Erindale chemistry instructor Judith Poë. She is one of ten country-wide recipients of this award, which is open to all of Canada's 39 000 university teachers.

Judith Poë

The award is not only given to teachers who excel, but to those who show a high amount of leadership and commitment to the improvement of university teaching and instruction within and outside their disciplines.

Judith Poë has been instrumental in establishing and maintaining the quality of teaching in the Chemistry department, and has been involved in the Student's Physics and Chemistry Society. Furthermore, she has chaired the Erindale College Council for six years and is responsible for the planning, organization, and administration of all first-year laboratories and tutorials. She is also in charge of the appointment, training, and guidance of Chemistry tutors and teaching assistants.

Dale Roy, of the Society for Teaching and Learning in Higher Education, described her as having an outstanding student rating, first in her faculty, and as someone who has streamlined and attempted to redesign her course using computer-assisted design.

Roy further described her as being someone who easily met the two basic criteria for the 3M award: firstly; having an outstanding reputation for teaching, among students and faculty alike, and secondly, he said that she was an educational leader, not just interested in her own course but having a concern for student learning in general.

"We look for people who are doers, who have had an effect on the faculty as a whole," Roy said Judith Poë said that she has always made a conscious effort to make sure students understand the reasons why someone would find an interest in the subject. She hoped her students, whether they carried through with chemistry or not, would retain enough of the subject matter to make educated decisions on the social issues of the day, such as environmental and consumer issues.

She describes her teaching philosophy as being one which emphasizes the development of respect for research and becoming comfortable dealing with a complex, changing body of knowledge such as chemistry.

September is finally here. The missing computer sure would have been handy, but then so would better organization. The new kids on the block seemed to fit in ok. Kevin, in particular, took a lot of abuse - especially in the wee hours. This is going to be a good year from the looks of it. Quality over quantity will definitely be the idea. Mell, hope you figure things out for the best. Kevin, Ann and Jon - welcome and good work. Rick finally made it in so we can sell some ads. Excellent. Miss you M.

Director lacking responsibility

Imploring people to get involved is an ages old plea, but one which has merit. The most valid reason is that nowadays employers are looking for more than good grades; they want to see extra-curricular activity. Erindale offers many opportunities, ranging from clubs to athletics to the newspaper to the various student eouncils. Actually, normally there would not be an opportunity to run for any of the student councils. They are all decided at the end of the preceding year.
Fortunately for any interested person(s) Erindale was blessed with someone whose irresponsibility overcame her ambition. Last year Michelle Au ran for the positions of Clubs Administrator on the Erindale College Student Union and Viee President Finance on the Erindale College Athletics and Recreation Association. There was a mild outery about her eapabilities to handle both jobs but neither ECSU nor ECARA had something in their constitutions which speeifically prevented her from running.
The somewhat vaeous and definitely apathetie students had no such concerns though, voting her into both positions. Then, for whatever reasons, Au proeeeded to miss all but one of the summer ECSU meetings and all of the ECARA meetings. She definitively set an example of what not to do when you want to get involved. Clearly the University Experience is different than simply getting a good university education, but it is detrimental to grab for more than you ean handle.
Never-the-less the positions are now open and by-elections will be held in the next couple of weeks. Anyone interested in showing that responsibility is not a dying art can use this opportunity to add great résume fodder and to meet a few new friends.

WANTED

medium II* has need of a few good people.

(political correctness altering a once common phrase) SOME of you we'll pay, some will pay - in one way or another. If you are interested in getting involved pick a side:

With pay

Distribution Manager - requirements:
- must have Monday off.
- must have own car, and be willing to load copious amounts of ink laden newsprint into it.
- must have perverse desire to open nylon straps with bare hands in an attempt to 'spread the word'.

Copy Editor- requirements:
- must be free Saturday & Sunday for a few hours.
- must have strong grammatical and spelling ability.
- must have an eye for detail and a desire to see the medium II be as error free as possible.

Typesetter - requirements:
- must have Friday off, at least the afternoon.
- must be able to type reasonably quickly and accurately while working generally unsupervised.

Without pay

Photographers - requirements:
- must have own camera and a desire to use it.
- must be able to meet deadlines.
- must have perverse desire to stick nose and lens into any situation to get the best shot.

Writers- requirements:
- NO EXPERIENCE NECESSARY, however;
- must know what the English language is.
- must have at least passable writing ability.
- definitely must be able to meet deadlines.

Critics- requirements:
- must have something on your mind; the more opinionated the better.
- must take the time to write letters to the Editor or guest columns on issues which bother or intrigue you.

ANYONE INTERESTED IN ANY OF THE 'JOBS' LISTED ABOVE SHOULD DROP BY ROOM F18 IN THE CROSSROADS BUILDING, OR CALL 828-5260 AND ASK FOR STEVE.

Too often people perceive the medium II as being elitist and cliquish. Whatever the reasons, this year we hope to dispel negative thinking replacing it with openness and an improved paper. To that end we are starting the year with a mini-feature on ourselves, introducing who we are, what we do and what we hope to do.

Our goal at the medium II is to blend didacticism with entertainment; the impetus being your - the students' - wants. Our guiding principle is that we offer something that can't be found in the daily papers. If we review a film it will more often than not be something slightly out of the mainstream. By the same token, our news stories will tend to focus on Erindale rather than looking at everything which goes on at U of T or outside of the University.

Having given you a brief outline of our goals by constantly referring to 'our' and 'we', it is time to introduce ourselves. We are a group of 'students' who are either attempting to use this experience as a springboard to a career in journalism or are simply interested in being involved. There are eight elected, paid positions as well as several hired spots. Our writers and photographers are Erindale students; they are also all volunteers. Each section of the paper has an editor who in turn has his/her own 'staff' of writers/photographers. These people either are assigned stories which the editor feels will be of interest to the student body or they write about something which interests them. Lists of positions can be boring but useful, and no introduction to the paper would be complete without actually mentioning the various people for whom medium II is home away from home. Mellanie Ellerton is the Features Editor and the driving force for this piece. Anyone who feels that school doesn't provide enough essay writing should contact her. Lloyd Aning is our resident computer expert; any suggestions on the look of the paper are best directed to him. The news is what sets the tone of many papers and ours is often no different. Kevin Sager is a second year student who has been entrusted with this daunting task. The Arts encompass a variety of interests and many newcomers to the medium II find this to be their section of choice. Ann Shisko hopes that this continues this year; she doesn't want to alienate anyone nor does she want to pander. Tamara Wickens brings her competitive spirit to the world of sports. Writers are constantly in demand, the best choices being people who play on Erindale teams. If this covers you please take one giant step forward. The most recent addition to medium II is the Time to Play section. Paul Paradine is what many would consider weird; actually he is just a little eccentric and he loves to perturb the readers with trivia , games and puzzles. He loves anything to do with thinking that doesn't involve a classroom.

We can be found hanging out over in the Crossroads Building, Room F18. It's the one with the big hat on the window. We are fortunate enough to be given use of this room by the College because we are attempting to provide a service to the students. However this does not mean that we are affiliated with the College. We are an independent, non-profit corporation with an elected student Board of Directors. The Board oversees financial matters, an area which most students probably don't think about. medium II operates with a budget of approximately $70, 000. We receive $7.25 from each full-time student and, at the moment, nothing from part-time students. One day in the not to distant future we hope to hit them up for a bit of pocket change as well. The student fees only cover half of our expenses; the rest is paid for through advertising revenue. To clarify it a bit further, the costs involved for printing the paper are covered by the incidental fees while the costs of paying our salaries and other operating expenses are covered by the ads. One of the biggest 'other expenses' we have is the photocopier. medium II offers an unbelievable deal on breaking textbook copyright laws; for only five cents per copy you can gyp the bookstore out of their income.Our space includes a darkroom and several power supplies. I mention this because our Photography Editor does all of the film developing and printing right here; his (hers) is one of the jobs on staff which requires specific technical knowledge. The power supplies come in handy because the production of the newspaper is all done here also; we use a Macintosh desktop publishing system to design the pages before sending the paper to a printer.

My name is Steve Viau and I've been hanging around this place for longer than most of the faculty. A few years ago I got involved with the medium II and now I am the boss - theoretically. My hopes are that we will offer the students what they want without sacrificing too much of what we want. I try to have all of the stories verified and edited thoroughly before going to print and I welcome criticism on what we do - constructive hopefully. The News may be boring but it will at least attempt to be informative. The Arts will, ideally, open new ways of thinking and looking at things by exploring the world of film, music and the performing arts. The Features will do more of the same and will be the sort of section we want you to read to escape textbook learning. Escapism in general will be the focus of Time to Play and we welcome Erindale cartoonists and input on diversions. The Sports has always survived on reporting ball hockey but this is a minor part of the overall picture, one we intend to explore this year. I'll be busy trying to keep everyone on track while adding my own commentary to the mix in the Editorial section. It is here that students have the greatest opportunity to vent themselves, either through a letter to the Editor or a guest column. In closing, let me reiterate that we welcome input and are looking forward to an interactive 93-94 publishing year. End of rhetoric.

Escaping North Bay

EYE ON THE ARTS
by Ann Shisko

Well, I am back from a summer filled with fun and frolic and great memories of the arts events I attended. While I was up in good old North Bay many events passed me by, but who can attend everything? Lollapalooza was a success as was CFNY Day, and the god-like Leonard Cohen added command performances after his sold-out concerts in June.

Peter Gabriel hadn't toured since 1986 but put on a spectacular show at Skydome in June. Gabriel successfully blended theatre with personal songs that focused on relationships in Blood of Eden, In Your Eyes and Come Talk to Me. The best part of the show was Gabriel's voice. He hit all of the notes I never expected him to sing at a live performance - Steam was especially rockin', along with Games Without Frontiers.

Jesus Christ Superstar brought down the house at the O'Keefe Centre in August. It has been 20 years since Ted Neeley and Carl Anderson played Jesus and Judas respectively in the ever-popular Norman Jewison film.. Somehow they managed to improve upon their screen performances. Their voices were amazing, as was Dennis DeYoung's, who played Pilate.

DeYoung - the former lead singer for Styx - was at home on stage, and the cast concentrated on the music more than the acting, making the production come across like a rock concert. Superstar cannot go out of style - its popularity seems to be timeless.

The Shaw Festival in Niagara-On-The-Lake was disappointing. Agatha Christie's And Then There Were None was a typical murder-mystery, and one that no one really cared "whodunnit". The pace was so slow that it seemed like some actors forgot their lines, or else they just weren't interested in the script at all.

Gentlemen Prefer Blondes is one of those musicals that you whisper to your date - "I feel a song coming on!" Rosemary Doyle played Lorelei Lee with very little charisma and failed to suck the audience into her quest to marry a rich man. Unfortunately, this made the whole show come off looking like a bad Richard Chamberlain mini-series.

Look forward to an equally interesting fall with new movie releases, concerts and theatre.

Stripping at Stratford; can you imagine that?

by Ann Shisko

The Stratford Festival houses the largest repertory company in North America, and is ranked among the three great theatres of the English speaking world.

Tyrone Guthrie conceived the Stratford Festival and was the driving force behind its ambition and subsequent success. He insisted that the quality of theatre rank among the best in the world. On July 13, 1953 Alec Guinness made a historical entrance as Richard III in the pioneer production at the Festival. That night the company received a standing ovation, recognizing that Stratford was about to become a centre of major theatrical importance.

Stratford is a success story that continues to thrive even in these troubled economic times. With an approximate budget of $25 million this year, Stratford mounted eleven regular shows in three theatre, as well as workshops, backstage tours, costume warehouse tours, post performance discussions, and Sharon Pollock and Robertson Davies.

Here is a brief look at a couple of the shows still running.

Moliere's The Imaginary Invalid never stops delivering laughs thanks to the superb comic timing demonstrated by the entire cast. William Hutt plays Argan - a hypochondriac who wants to marry off his daughter to a doctor in order to receive free medical treatment. His daughter Angelique (Monique Lund) is in love with Cleante (Paul Miller) and refuses to marry the man her father has introduced to her - Dr. Thomas Diafoirus (Stephen Ouimette).

Typical comedic elements such as the use of disguise, mistaken identity, social satire, lying and deceit lead to many hysterical plot twists.

Sheila McCarthy plays Toinette, Argan's bawdy servant and the foil to his plans to remain "ill" for free. Simple physical and vocal expressions bring Toinette to life as she nods in agreement with her master and expresses her disagreement to the audience. Stephen Ouimette's brilliant portrayal of Diafoirus, whose manipulation of his huge bow-tie shoes steals many scenes.

The attention to detail in terms of characterization, physicality, costuming and props makes the show light, fast-paced and thoroughly enjoyable.

I would definitely recommend Gypsy. How can a show that features has-been strippers with blinking lights on their g-strings miss? You have to see it to believe it.

Gypsy tells the story of the ultimate stage-Mom Rose Hovick, and her daughters: the multi-talented June and the shy, awkward Louise. Rose builds a vaudeville act around the two girls and becomes obsessed with "making it" in showbiz.

Eventually, June leaves and Rose focuses her attention on Louise. The act ends up at a burlesque house and Louise finally finds her forte - stripping. She changes her name to Gypsy Rose Lee and becomes the most famous stripper of all time.

While the whole cast is exceptional, I must point out Monique Lund's incredibly sensitive and layered performance as Louise. I found her maturation from a young girl to a seasoned adult within the show to be completely believable.

Even at the worst of times the audience easily observes Louise's love and support toward her domineering mother, while at the same time happily carving out a niche for herself in the world of burlesque.

In a part that was created for the unforgettable Ethel Merman, Sandra O'Neill pulls off a spirited and classy performance as Mama Rose. She makes it difficult not to admire her drive, passion and determination to become famous, as the chance to establish a "normal family passes her by.

Gypsy is an exciting musical that offers quality acting and great entertainment value.

The Stratford Festival has a lot to offer students interested in theatre. There is still time to take in excellent shows until November 14 at great student prices (only $20 for every show!).

The 1993 season offers different genres of plays that would satisfy even the most picky arts palette.

I want you to write for the Arts section! Call Ann at 828-5260.

Orientation pales in comparison to Frosh Olympics

by Tamara Wickens

This year's presentation of Playfair, brought to us by ECARA, in addition to the third annual Frosh Olympics went off without a hitch this past Saturday.

Approximately 200 frosh and 50 leaders came together to participate in a giant fun in the sun day; it all began with an hour-long session spent with Gerry Ewen, the Playfair representative.

Playfair is a unique blend of audience participation comedy routines, non-competitive adult play experiences and newly created group dynamic exercises

This year's host was especially adept at getting strangers to become friends. Ewen emphasized how difficult coming to a strange environment is but added that this event would bring everyone together. His enthusiasm and dynamic style did just that.

Following Playfair the students headed out to the South Field for the Frosh Olympics. Twenty teams of about 12 people participated in 10 events ranging from the new water balloon launch to the modified obstacle relay.

From all accounts the organization of Playfair and Frosh Olympics outshined ECSU's attempt at orienting the frosh. Freshman David Johnson said, "This is the most fun we've had in three days, and we're not even drinking!" Janet Monks commented that Playfair host Gerry Ewen was excellent, "He helped us come out of our shells."

By the end of the day, when all the awards had been given out, about 200 frosh were ready to launch their university careers in anticipation.

Playfair is another great success thanks to the organization of this year's athletic council.

Erindale's gym facilities get a new look

by Dale Lawless

Where is the best weight room at the University of Toronto? Yes, right here at Erindale. Last February the Erindale College Athletic and Recreation Association (ECARA) got the OK from students who voted in a referendum for an athletic fee increase. Over the summer ECARA delivered on their promise to purchase new equipment for the Fitness/weight room and the purchase of new bleachers soon to be installed during the week of October 18th, well before capacity seating is required for ball hockey season.

New equipment for the weight room includes two electronic stationary bikes, an upper body workout machine known as a Gravitron, and a stairmaster to add to the two acquired last January. Two rowing egrometers were upgraded to make four so more than just the rowing crew can have a turn. Additional benches were also bought for free weight buffs.

"The fitness equipment was purchased particularly with the first time user in mind" said Athletic Director Peter Baxter. "For many people a weight room is an intimidating place, especially for women. Because the machines are easy to use, safe, and geared to a person's own level, the non-user may think of trying it out."

The total bill for the fitness equipment was just over $15,000. The new bleaches complete with manufacturer's "comfort curve" to your butt benches will cost $24,000. Other purchases included safety padding for the gym walls and windows over looking the gymnasium from the corridor on the ECARA office level for the ball hockey press and talent scouts.

What is left on ECARA's shopping list? " a bigger gym" ECARA President Jack Krist stated. "What we have isn't enough for a college this size."

By the way, what's a Gravitron? For details ask the Den Staff or check out the best weight room in the university yourself.

Lessons learned will show

REVELATIONS from Tamara

Holy shit! Did this summer fly by? After 4 months of saying "Here's a free sample of great tasting Diet Pepsi!" I am here to say I'm glad to be back and talking normally.

Many strange and wonderful things happened this summer which have softened my attitude toward many things.

Those of you who know me will say ...impossible? To say the least, I was somewhat abrasive in my articles last year. This year I hope to soften up. Still I will point out where I see changes need to be made. But by the same token I will maintain that people need to be given a chance.

As far as the coverage goes, there will be a definite increase in the coverage of all sports at Erindale and downtown. There is only one condition to this. I need the help of all the athletes possible to write for me. I can cover some, but not all sports. This is the first week of school so I am requesting that any and all prospective sports writers come forward. A point to bear in mind: NO EXPERIENCE IS NECESSARY. Most people will attest to the fact that I had no idea what I was doing when I started.

If you are motivated and can put sentences together... I want you!

Stay tuned for Sports features dealing with the 100th anniversary of women's involvement in Sports. Again, if anyone has any ideas about what they'd like to see in the section let me know.

Limericks

There was a young outlaw named Hood,
Who lived in the Nottingham Wood;
He learned how to fuck,
from old Friar Tuck,
And made Marian whenever he could.

The fact of the matter is, Jack
Had long wanted Jill on her back;
So he told her some tale
About filling a pail,
And then bungled his plan of attack.

There was a young lady ... tut tut!
So you think you're in for some smut?
Some five-line crescendo
Of lewd innuendo?
Well, you're wrong. This is anything but.
